APPENDIX 1 An audit of non-residential properties on the Royal Mile	21

The Audit in 2012

This report is the second publication of a series from an ongoing study into the concept of authenticity, which uses the Royal Mile as the case-study. Details about this study are presented in the first report “An Audit of a UNESCO World Heritage site - the Royal Mile, Edinburgh: a preliminary search for authenticity” (Harwood & El-Manstrly, 2012). As stated in the first publication, “the overall aim of the study is to attempt to understand the multi-faceted nature of authenticity and establish whether and how the concept of authenticity can be used by businesses and policy makers” (Harwood & El-Manstrly, 2012).

The aim of this report is to provide an update of the 2011 Royal Mile audit, this being conducted on the first anniversary of the first audit which was conducted between 15th and 21st July 2011. This second audit was conducted between 15th and 21st July 2012. Like the previous report, it is predominantly a visual record of the street in the form of 56 photographs. However, unlike the previous report, it only focuses on two themes.

The first concerns changes over the year in non-residential street-facing properties on the Royal Mile, focusing upon those that are readily apparent. This is supplemented with an update of the details about these properties, drawing upon the Scottish Assessors Association (SAA) Valuation Roll for 21st July. This allows for a comparison with the 2011 profile allowing changes in ownership and tenancy to be identified. This also allows for possible errors to be revealed in the earlier report as a result of delays in the updating of the SAA Valuation Roll.

The second theme is that of the local community and where they live. Whilst the evidence of their habitation is found facing (the front) onto the Royal Mile in the form of front doors and the windows above the various non-residential properties, it is to the back that the living nature of the community is revealed through personalised balconies and other spaces. However, whereas the front draws attention from policy makers and other stakeholders, the back receives lesser treatment, but is of no lesser importance. It is a space where there is visible expression of the community.

The report is completed with an Appendix that updates the corresponding Appendix for 2011 and provides details about non-residential street-facing doorways in the Royal Mile.

The value of the first report as a working document, revealed a number of errors, for which a corrigenda follows:

Corrigenda to the first report

- Pages 5 and 63: ‘Role’ is misspelt and should be ‘Roll’
- Page 60: F91 & F92 - ‘Golden Nicholson’ should be ‘Gordon Nicholson’.
- Page 60: F96 – Real Scot Shop should be at 16 High Street, not 50 High Street.
- Page 61: F155 – ‘Conongait’ should be ‘Canongate’.
- Page 63: ‘June 2011’ should be ‘July 2011’
- Page 63: Riddel’s Court’s should be ‘Riddle’s Court’ (stonework above entrance has this inscribed)
- Page 65: the word ‘Experience’ in ‘Loch Ness Experience’ is misspelt in original
- Page 65: ‘Waldrop’s Close’ should be ‘Waldrop’s Court’
- Page 67: ‘Byer’s Close’ should be ‘Byre’s Close’
- Page 74: ‘Cambell’s Close’ should be ‘Campbell’s Close’

The 'Toured Object' revisited

The audit of the Royal Mile in 2012 reveals that there have been changes affecting about 10% of the non-residential sites over the year between the two audits. Details are presented in Appendix 1. The ownership / tenancy details from the SAA do not appear to have been updated for at least three sites. This is one problem with the use of the SAA data. It is now apparent that, at least one property in the 2011 audit was recorded then, as being under a previous tenant (e.g. The Crest of Edinburgh). Moreover, it does not capture details of sub-letting by the tenant. Nevertheless, the SAA data reveals only two changes in ownership, whilst there have been twenty changes in tenancy, excluding three sites where details have clearly not been updated. In terms of the total number of non-residential properties, there appears to be two losses these related to self-catering accommodation.

When observable changes are noted, there appears to be fifteen sites which can be identified by changes in name (e.g. Royal Mile Cashmere, Kilderkin) or activity (e.g. Cranachan & Crowdie, Whisky & Wine), irrespective of whether there has been a change of tenant. These fifteen sites are presented in the next section, together with two other sites which have had changes in their frontage.

In summary, Table 1 provides an assessment of the changes in the use of the non-residential sites over the year. It reveals that there was a net reduction in closed (vacant) sites (by 2) and a very small net increase in retail and food / drink outlets. There are developments underway for another site, the Tron Kirk, which is currently listed as a historic building; this is undergoing refurbishment and is due to open for the Fringe Festival. As for the other sites, where there has been a change in ownership or tenancy, it is assumed that the business continues as before.

Towards the end of that audit, the House of Cashmere (#44) was opened. A year later, the Abercrombie Cashmere (#46) had been renamed Royal Mile Cashmere and both outlets had a freshened exterior. The final two photos are taken through the front doorways of both shops drawing attention to similarities (e.g. chandeliers). These retail outlets are owned by two competing businesses]

In search of a community

The Royal Mile contains a community. There are, according to a search on the SSA database on 22nd July 2012, 418 properties with street facing addresses that are registered to pay Council Tax. There are many more with access from closes or the courts. The majority of residential properties are in Canongate (308), with 70 in the High Street and 35 in the Lawnmarket. The population living with a street view of the Royal Mile cannot be insignificant, but if one looks for evidence of this community, then it is not readily visible to the observer. The evidence is scant (e.g. the primary school, Canongate Kirk), particularly in the upper stretches of the street (e.g. High Street, Lawnmarket). This is illustrated in F 39, which presents a view looking up the High Street towards St Giles Cathedral, with a crowd awaiting the Queen to make the return journey from the Thistle Service of The Order of the Thistle (5th July 2012). The street is bounded by two stark walls pitted with opaque windows. Even though it is a dreich day and a 'big' day, there is no evidence of a living community. The following images have been taken with the aim of gaining an insight into this residential domain.

APPENDIX 1 An audit of non-residential properties on the Royal Mile

This table was compiled in July 2012 using data gathered by ‘Walking’ the Royal Mile. It provides a listing of street facing doorways and excludes properties accessed through closes. Proprietor and Tenant details were identified from the public document, The Valuation Roll, provided by the Scottish Assessors Association. It has already been mentioned that the accuracy of the data contained on the Valuation Roll has not been verified, with the possibility that these details have not been updated, particularly for more recent changes in ownership / occupancy. The data highlighted in red identifies changes. Italics reveal the previous form.
